

National Post, July 20, 2006

Hats off to the National Post for the excellent editorial reminding us not to forget the Mumbai bombings. The US State Department has noted that in the last decade, more Indians have died from terror than any other nation. For years prior to 9/11 (and even after), the West has been overlooking this carnage and has failed to hold the Islamic Republic of Pakistan to account. Now is the time to fix this.

On July 22nd, a broad coalition of Hindu groups, led by the Hindu Conference of Canada, will be holding a mass vigil in Toronto, demanding firm action from the Indian government and expressing support and admiration for Israel's stance in the Middle East. The Hindu and Jewish communities stand united in the face of Islamist terror which threatens both great democracies, India and Israel.
